New BOD members stress more student involvement

By Jennie Jonson
Staff Writer

An unusually high voter turnout during the recent Board of Directors election may be the first step towards increased student participation in ASC activities — the main goal of the newly elected BOD.

Elected at winter quarter registration are Michael Caine, Jeff Morris, Lisa Mollett, Darren Hecker and Joe Dixon. They will take office at the beginning of spring quarter.

"I feel good about this new board," said Caine, an incumbent who claimed the presidential spot with 1,121 votes.

Caine said he wants to continue working toward improving programs which already have been successful with students, as well as incorporating new ones.

"I think a good way to do this is to expand student involvement in activities and committees," he said.

"The only way I can successfully represent the students is if I get feedback from them. This is something I will continue to work on throughout my next term," he said.

Previous efforts to get feedback from students, such as the question and answer line on KCAT, the campus radio station, and BOD attendance at residence hall meetings, have met with great success, said Caine.

Improved student involvement seems to be high on the list of each newly elected board member.

Morris said more student involvement in BOD elections is needed.

"It (the last election) had a better turnout than usual, but still, it was only 35 percent," said Morris, Central's chapter president of the Washington Student Lobby.

Fellow board members Mollett, Hecker and Dixon, share this view. Mollett, like Morris, said more interaction with students would increase voter turnout.

Hecker said the entire election procedure and campaign promotional activities need to be reviewed.

Dixon stressed the importance of student involvement in planning the ASC budget.

"We should get feedback from students on all activities, so we know what goes and what doesn't."

Dixon said, "This can help us plan our budget better and open us up to new ideas."

Mollett, a CWU cheerleader, feels the BOD needs to become more aware of the various clubs on campus.

"I decided the best way to make them (the BOD) more aware was to run for office," she said.

"I'm sure the new board will be very receptive. We all seem to be working toward the same thing."

All five new BOD members are enthusiastic about representing the students.

"This is our home. We should all work toward improving our community," said Hecker.

Morris received 915 votes; Mollett, 907; Hecker, 879 and Dixon, 850.

Ex-student claims false arrest

By Susan Cottman
News Editor

A former Central student claims he was falsely imprisoned by campus security two years ago.

He has now filed a claim in King County for $100,000 in damages against the state of Washington, according to documents obtained from the attorney general's office in Olympia.

Kenneth Wayne Roy, age unknown, 3309-21st Ave. S., Seattle, is seeking damages for "damage to reputation, emotional distress, interruption of school activities and extreme mental anxity" that allegedly occurred in spring of 1982 when Roy was charged with extortion in Kittitas County.

Roy was arrested by campus security and charged in Kittitas County Superior Court with two counts of second degree extortion allegedly threatening to make public a tape recording of a 19-year-old Central female student engaged in sexual relations with a male in February 1982.

According to case documents, Roy allegedly tried to extort money and sex from the female student.

The case against Roy went to trial the following June. Superior Court Judge W. R. Cole granted a motion from Roy's attorney to dismiss the charges for lack of plausible evidence.

Currently, attorney Terrence Kellogg, 1210 Smith Tower, Seattle, is representing Roy in the claim.

Roy is basing his claim for damages "upon intentional infliction of emotional distress, false imprisonment, false arrest, malicious prosecution, violation of constitutional rights, negligence, libel and slander," according to a copy of the claim.

Campus Security Chief Al Teeples chose not to comment.

Roy is asking for $2,000 damages in attorney's fees and $98,000 in general damages.

Ford sentenced for firing gun

By Karla Miller
Staff Writer

Scott H. Ford was found guilty of reckless endangerment by Kittitas County District Court on Jan. 3.

He was fined $250 and five days in jail and must pay for the damage within 30 days. The jail term and $150 are deferred in the event that he has no more criminal violations for one year, excluding traffic violations.

In November, Ford fired two rounds of birdshot from a .410 gauge shot gun through the wall of his Student Village apartment.

The first shot was fired early in the evening with two male witnesses present. It was fired into the upper part of the bedroom wall into the loft.

An angered Ford fired a second shot into the same wall later in the evening. The shot occurred after an argument with his girlfriend.

Each hole was "about the size of a silver dollar," Tim Barker, one of the witnesses said.

Steve Haynes, Ford's roommate, said the shot was fired where he knew no one would get hurt.

"That was the safest place he could have shot," said Haynes. "Nothing happened but that (the hole in the wall)."

Ford stressed "I knew what I was doing."

Over enrollment

Eastern criticized, but Central spared

OLYMPIA (UPI) — The State Attorney General's office has been asked to investigate whether Eastern Washington University's president George Frederickson has acted to thwart the intent of the legislature in the area of enrollment.

Seeking the investigation Thursday was Joe Tallier, director of the State Office of Financial Management.

Tallier told a House Ways and Means Committee meeting that, in his opinion, EWU "has clearly violated the intent of the legislature" by enrolling more students than the state is willing to pay for.

Four other state institutions, including Central, are also over-enrolled.

Frederickson and Eastern have been under the scrutiny of the state since the school purchased a downtown Spokane bank building last year and converted it to a city-education center.

Rep. Dan Grimm, D-Puyallup, criticized Eastern and Frederickson for having 292 students more than its budgeted quota of 7,000.

Grimm accused Frederickson of "doing as you damn well please" and added the school was in "direct violation of the budget and accounting act."

After the meeting, Grimm said he thought Frederickson should be fired.

As far as enrollment, state documents show only Washington State University has met the state mandate.

The University of Washington is 163 students over; Central 289; Evergreen 142; and Western 330.

Central's president, Donald Garrity, may have been spared criticism because of a report by Central that was disseminated to key lawmakers last December.

The report, prepared by Jerry L. Jones, special assistant to the president, claims that Central is not enrolling more students but rather is retaining more undergraduates.

Central's quality of education is not decreasing because of over-enrollment, Jones said.

He presented evidence that Central is taking fewer applicants than in past years and that these students are of a higher caliber than previous students.

"The grade point averages of the entering freshmen classes for 1981, 1982 and 1983 are 2.87, 2.91 and 2.96, respectively," he said.

Jones attributed Central's higher retention rate to "an increase in the quality of the students we have on our campus as well as improvements in the quality of our programs."

Munson reopens as residence hall to house students from Muzzall

By Karla Miller
Staff Writer

Central's newest residence hall has existed since 1926, but was reopened officially as a residence hall Saturday.

Dr. Donald Garrity, president of the university, cut the ribbon declaring Munson open for residents again.

Munson was opened to accommodate the overflow of students being moved out of Muzzall.

Muzzall was closed at the end of last quarter because it was needed as a conference center. Munson was opened as a residence hall on a permanent basis.

"It is a unique thing to open a new residence hall," Carl Keeler, director of residence living, said. The last time a new residence hall was opened was in 1968.

The newly opened hall is all-male now, but will probably go coed next fall, Jim Hollister, director of Housing Services said.

The building is set up with pairs of rooms and a bathroom between them.

"This lends itself easily to coed," Hollister said.

The staff is pumped up about it (the opening), and most of the people moving in are excited about creating a new community," said Hollister.

The new residents are excited about developing a personality for the building. Dr. Donald Garrity, president of the college, said.

Mitch Bouldin, Munson Hall manager suggested the open house to get some exposure on campus.

"We want to get off on the right foot this quarter," Bouldin said.

"This hall will strive to be the best on campus," said Monty McElroy, member of Munson Hall activities committee.

About half the residents of Munson are from Muzzall and the other half is new this quarter.

We were sad about Muzzall closing, but at the same time we are excited about Munson opening," Doug Luse, Living Group Advisor of Munson Hall said.

Tuition freeze may save students cold cash

Tuition costs have soared by approximately 64.6 percent in the last three years.

These fees are expected to climb by at least 8 percent next year, according to figures published by the Washington Student Lobby, a coalition of the six Washington state universities.

It would seem students are the helpless victims of the state legislature. Not so. Legislators are responsive to their constituents — especially when it is an election year and when those needs are broadcast loudly and persistently.

According to Jeff Morris, president of the Central chapter of WSL, some legislators, including chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee, Sen. Jim McDermott, believe the student lobby could influence legislators to pass a tuition freeze bill during this legislative session.

Central students currently pay 25 percent of the cost of education at CWU.

The tuition freeze bill would change that. First, tuition costs would be frozen at the level attained in the 1985-86 academic year.

This freeze would remain in effect until the percentage of the cost of education Central students pay reaches 20 percent. At that point, tuition would begin to rise again — but at a slower rate than at present.

The Council for Postsecondary Education, a body that monitors requests for financial aid and grants among other things, shows a $150 million gap between the amount needed and the amount available.

We need that tuition freeze bill to preserve the availability of higher education.

Central's chapter of WSL and the ASC are cosponsoring a trip to Olympia Monday for students who would like to testify before the Senate Ways and Means Committee concerning the bill. Vans will be going to Olympia. Sign up for ride at the ASC information booth in the SUB.

Anyone can testify before the committee. One does not need vast knowledge about the legislature and how it works. Only knowledge of how hard it can be to go to school with escalating tuition is needed.

Morris said the biggest impact students can have on legislators is many student testimonies. A great number of testimonies indicate to the lawmakers that the WSL is representative of thousands of students and not just a select few.

You, the students affected by higher tuition costs, need to join Morris and the WSL in the siege on Olympia.

If but a few students testify, the impact will be minimal and the opportunity for students to become something other than legislative victims is lost. We need NUMBERS over there. Don't expect the other guy to speak for you, speak for yourself.

If we don't start participating in the system by testifying and voting, no legislator is going to bother to listen to us. If we get the enough people behind the effort, lawmakers will listen.

If you can't make it to Olympia Monday, then call or write a letter. The legislature has a toll free hotline, 1-800-562-6000. Use it. Leave a message for McDermott or the legislator from your district sitting on the committee asking for support of the tuition freeze bill. Letters should be addressed to a particular senator, at the Legislative Building, Olympia, Wash. 98504.

We need to alert the legislators to the fact that we will no longer be the goat by which to balance the state budget.

Get involved in this matter. We have a chance to help get this bill passed. This chance is not going to come by again in the near future.

Invest time in your education today and maybe you'll need to invest less money in it in the future.

***The executive director of the WSL will be speaking about testifying before a legislative committee today in the SUB Pit at noon.

We would like your opinion on this matter. Please answer and clip this ballot. Ballots may be delivered to the Campus Crier, Bouillon 227, or placed in ballot envelope in lobby of residence hall.

The Washington Student Lobby is campaigning to get a voting student representative on each university Board of Trustees, the governing body for the university.

Students at Washington State University are against the measure.

"WSU students are generally more conservative thinkers and aren't interested in the activities of the regents." — Dan O'Connell, WSU student body president.

Students at the University of Washington, Eastern Washington University, Western Washington University and The Evergreen State College have yet to voice opposition to the plan.

"The trustees don't go to classes and don't know firsthand the problems students face. A voting student could add perspective to the policies formulated by the trustees." — Heather Coughlin, CWU student.

What is your opinion?

☐ Yes, I think that there should be a student on the Board of Trustees

☐ No I do not think there should be a student on the Board of Trustees

Professor drops bomb on mass media

To the editor:

Nobody likes to underwrite his own public criticism. This is why, I suppose, no media figure regularly undertakes to detail his profession's own growing vacuity.

But should America and her ideals someday fall — and assuming that after such fall, people are alive and free to write histories — there will be some sober analyses of how one could preach freedom and enlightenment, practice sensationalism and hyperbole, and lead lemming-like a civilization into oblivion.

As radio announcers brusquely bark who don't mind being rude to audience and sponsor alike, "Now this:"

The nation's capitol has just been bombed. As to who did it, we haven't much to go on, just the usual anonymous letter or phone call. Such is not much use to the FBI. Little use, I daresay, even as a footnote on a Wildcat's term paper. With the press it was another matter. Newsweek did provide the astonishing insight that the evidence amounts to "a name of convenience cloaking any conceivable mad cause." Yet it was enough for the whole hive to buzz both name and cause before the world as taking what they like to call "responsibility" for the disaster.

How to excuse this abandonment of the basic procedures which a seeker after truth follows in order to recognize it when he finds it? How justify degrading oneself, one's power, and the freedom under which it is enjoyed to become a criminal's mouthpiece, as if to give some necessary and all-to-sufficient shard of sense to senseless acts? The public, goes the answer, has a right to know. And a verb conveniently goes without its object.

So mass media have their ratings. Terrorists present and future are reinforced with the publicity they crave. We the public know why and by whom the senate lies nearly in ruins, don't we? And the vicious circle of collaboration closes once more. Now this. What next? Aren't we grateful that we know?

I seem to remember reading somewhere before about too much right-to-know having us thrust out of a peaceful place.

Sincerely
Paul Emmons
assistant professor

Employee puts out fire caused by coffee pot

By Thomas Baxter
Staff Writer

Quick action by a Central employee Cheril Wendt may have prevented more serious damage in an early morning fire in Mitchell Hall, Friday.

The fire started in coffee pot on the second floor.

Wendt, an employee in student accounts, said she came in to work early because of the extra workload of registration and plugged in the coffee maker as usual. She had gone to work at a computer terminal when the fire began.

"I heard a 'pop' and saw a puff of smoke go straight up in the air," she said.

Wendt grabbed a portable fire extinguisher and quickly doused the fire. Serious damage was confined to the coffee maker and its cord. Some minor smoke damage occurred in the east end of the second floor.

When asked if she thought she was a heroine, she replied, "No, not really; I reacted like anyone else would."

The Ellensburg Fire Department was dispatched to the scene to make sure the fire was completely out.

The appliance, belonging to the business office coffee fund, was valued at $100.

High-tech education needs improvement

SEATTLE (UPI) — The state must beef up its educational commitment to high technology if it is to attract and reap the benefit of high-tech industries and jobs, a special state committee concluded in a five-month study.

A report released Friday by the Governor's Committee on High Technology Training and Advancement said high-tech industry is expected to show a rapid growth in its work force during the 1980s.

Specifically, the committee recommended the Legislature move to expand weekend and evening high-tech training programs for working people, raise faculty salaries in post-secondary schools, replace outmoded equipment and facilities and give tax credits for donations to schools of high-tech equipment and services.

The committee also said tuition should be waived for teaching and research assistants in high-tech fields and innovative training programs should be funded. Math and science teachers of grades K-12 should be retained, the panel said, and engineering colleges should develop plans assuring excellence.

The committee also urged the state to develop an overall action plan for high-tech development.

By 1990, the study said, between 194,000 and 245,000 people will hold down high tech-related jobs.

The study found a problem in the state's education and training system, which it said is not producing enough graduates in high-tech occupations.

Occupations with the worst shortfalls of qualified personnel, the study concluded, were electrical engineers, industrial engineers, computer scientists and electronics technicians, the study said.

Enrollments in high-tech courses in community colleges, the study said, have leveled off after earlier heavy growth because of state-imposed enrollment limits and attracting and retaining faculty in some fields is a problem.

The study said Washington students take fewer math and science courses than do students in other areas and blamed low salaries for the state's shortage of qualified math and science teachers.

BOD news

Rape prevention week sponsored

By Karla Miller
Staff Writer

Central's Board of Directors agreed to co-sponsor Rape Prevention Week with KCAT radio at its Tuesday meeting in the SUB Kachess Room.

Rape Prevention Week will be Jan. 30 to Feb. 3 and will feature talks and stories presented on the air (cable channel 91 FM) and one discussion at noon in the SUB Pit Feb. 1.

This question-and-answer session will be led by Shirley Fischer of Rape Relief. "This topic has remained virtually untouched for a long time and it is time something is done about it," said Carlo Narduzzi, KCAT news director.

Paul Byrne, political liaison for CWU, announced a Washington Student Lobby workshop in the SUB Pit today at noon. This workshop will teach students how to lobby and will be led by the executive director of WSL, Priscilla Schlett.

Also planned by WSL is a student caravan to Olympia to lobby this weekend.

"The tuition bill has a good chance of passing this time," Byrne said. "If you can't go to Olympia, we encourage you to write or even phone your legislators."

Current campus telephone directories are now available. The directories are being distributed in the residence halls and off-campus students may obtain copies from the ASC information booth.

CWU request nears $3 million

By Ellen Hlatt
Staff Writer

CWU president Donald Garrity has submitted a budget request of more than 2.9 million to the state, said Joseph M. Antonich, controller.

The request was made to supplement funding in three areas. $443,570 was budgeted in the request for funding new programs in mechanical and electrical engineering technology. $581,400 was budgeted in the request for equipment replacement. $1,969,000 was budgeted to complement funds for student enrollment.

The Council for Postsecondary Education (CPE) appointed Central to develop and implement pilot technology programs. This program has begun off-campus at Columbia Basin College and Ft. Steilacoom Community College.

The CPE has also approved the mechanical engineering program. Central hasn't received any funds yet.

President Garrity said in a meeting with Central Board of Trustees Dec. 9 that Central did not receive the same formula share of the legislative funding for equipment as the University of Washington. Central's request is for replacement of funds for equipment.

Central received funding for only $,800 of the $,100 full-time equivalent students enrolled. Central seeks funding for presently unfunded enrollment.

Admission plan proposed

By Kim Patzold
Staff Writer

The Faculty Senate has proposed a plan to toughen the admission standards for CWU, according to Phil Backlund, faculty senate chairman.

The plan, which won't be put in to effect until fall quarter 1987, will require students to take a high school college-preparatory course, along with a competency test before being accepted.

The requirements for this course are:

- 1) four years of English (including one year of literature and one year of composition),
- 2) three years of math (including algebra and geometry),
- 3) three years of science (including one year of a lab science),
- 4) two and one-half years of social studies (including history and civics) and
- 5) two years of one foreign language, he said.

The project of testing is still in the planning stage. Committees in the math and English departments are working along with other universities on the project.

'Focus in Color' featured in still lifes

By Patrick Dondanville
Staff Writer

The work of six photographers is featured in an art show at the Sarah Spurgeon Gallery in Randall Hall. The show will run through Jan. 27.

The show is called a "Focus in Color" and presents a variety of color photographic works that range from landscape, nature, documentary, still lifes, and abstract designs.

"Focus in Color" includes some nature and landscape photos from Robert Gauvreau, a photographer from Modesto, Calif. Another California photographer, Lawrie Brown of Santa Cruz, has a variety of contemporary photographs of food. These colorful still lifes, which include photos of a hotdog in a bun and breakfast cereal, have colorful stitchery sewn on

Two Seattle photographers, Stanley Smith and John Wesley, have photographs on display. Smith has shots of picture and fabric designs while Wesley is displaying photographs of Chinese store fronts.

Sarah Spurgeon Gallery is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The CWU music department is sponsoring a performance by classical guitarist James Kline Saturday at 8 p.m. in Hertz recital hall.

Tom K. Bourne, CWU music instructor and CWU graduate, met Kline this summer in Portland and asked him to come perform at Central.

"Jim is top in his profession," said Bourne. "He's not famous but he is good enough technically and musically to put the audience at ease so they can enjoy the music."

Kline will present two pieces by Francois Couperin, "The Mysterious Barricades" and "The Seventeenth Order." Kline also will play "Canzonetta," by Felix Mendelssohn; "Two Studies" by Fernando Sor and a contemporary work, "Sontina," by Jorge Morel. Kline will conduct a seminar for classical guitarists Sunday at 1 p.m. in Hertz Hall. Those interested in more information may call the CWU music office at 963-1216.

A music faculty member at both Lewis and Clark College and Reed College in Portland, Kline has studied under several noted guitarists, said Bourne.

The son of musical parents, Kline began his studies on the guitar at age 10. He performed his first recital at age 13.

Admission to his concert is $2.50.

Street gangs will take to the stage in 'West Side Story'

By Peter Blake
NCS Entertainment Editor

Full quarter, Central drama students portrayed the love and tragedy of "Romeo and Juliet." This quarter the student musical mountaintop will light up the stage.

"West Side Story" follows the interaction between two warring gangs, the Sharks and the Jets.

The production was directed by Tami, a member of the Art gang, and Maria, sister of the Shark gang leader.

The play is a joint production of the drama and music departments.

Richard Lattin, director of the drama department, is directing the play, musical director is Sidney Schneider, Beverly Orndorff is the choreographer and Jim Hankins is the costume designer.

The production, according to Schneider, has been a challenge even though the material is familiar.

"It's telling a play like this," explained Lattin, "there must be a balance of the best characterization and the most convincing."

"We had to put up some terrific things because they couldn't dance."

The cast has been rehearsing since Nov. 1 with practices Sunday through Thursday every week.

"The three week Christmas break didn't have any disastrous effects on performance," said Lattin.

According to Schneider, the music is being performed by an ensemble of the best instrumentalists on campus. He selected 28 musicians, mostly from the jazz department because the jazz influence is very strong in the play.

"West Side Story" will play Jan. 16, 17, 18 and 19 at the McCann Auditorium. Tickets are $2 for general admission and $4 for students and senior citizens.

The Jets prepare to mingle with the Puerto Rican Sharks. The last of the Jets and be protected from all appearances. — by Steve Miller. Maria has begged Tony to stop the fight but the gangs are determined to make war.

West Richard Lattin, Central drama department chairman, added Schneider's dance director Beverly Orndorff to choreograph the January production of "West Side Story," she remembered her first experience with that play.

at the age of 18, after seeing the movie version of the play and having learned about New York street gangs, she decided to have a closer look at the world of being a jet.

But, as it often the case, this dream-come-true was in reality a challenge. Instead of dancing, Orndorff would be working with 28 students, many of whom had no dance training, to prepare them for the difficult task of dancing and singing while portraying tough gang members.

She had only six weeks to prepare the cast for the Jets. Orndorff is a McCann Auditorium.

Orndorff recalls during to be told, as she watched the students. "Oh, no, oh, no, oh, no." But now she says, "I am impressed, I was hoping I would be."

Before rehearsal began, Orndorff and stage director Lattin traveled to Seattle to see the Chris Light Opera's production of "West Side Story."

Orndorff was glad she went. "To give me a chance to see what I did not want to do with the CWU version of the play."

Orndorff chose to create dances that were "more political" and to concentrate on keeping the action in character. "It's a difficult thing to do," agrees Orndorff, but the more she works with the cast the more capable they become.

at audition, she explained to the students, "I am looking for people who can think. If you can't think for yourself, just move right out."

Since then, she has found her reliance on the cast to be more important and more justified than she expected.

Working with a "consciously after school," Orndorff had to choreograph the dances in the weeks. "I thought it was next to impossible," she admits, "but I've done it."

She admits, however, that the process was like "teaching the students of my dream."

Over the weeks she has increased her expectations from the cast. In the beginning, Orndorff found she had to repeat movements over and over until her help built. Now she needs only to demonstrate the movement once or twice, and the dancers learn it.

"They have been to get a real knowledge of the music, and I am looking forward to that."

Orndorff admits the dancers to improve. "They do very well at it," she admits.

Tony and Maria reach each other again for the first time. Neither knows what fate has in store for them. At left, Steve Miller and Susan Ludwig. (Photo by Peter Blake)

Drain plug pulled on Pavilion pool

By Kevin Roen
Sports Editor

The Central men's swim team has an excellent chance at placing high in this season's national competition, but they have one stumbling block: there is no water in the Nicholson Pavilion pool.

All of the water was drained during the winter break so repairs could be done to improve the heating, ventilation, and acoustics of the pool area.

However, the repair work has led to other problems. According to Athletic Director Gary Frederick, the work was scheduled to begin after Thanksgiving vacation, but delays in sending bids led to a delay in the start of construction.

It was well into the swim season by the time the work did get underway. Frederick said the beginning of construction came as a surprise to him.

"It was a complete surprise," said Frederick. "I came back from a trip with the girls' basketball team, and found out work had started on the pool."

Men's swim team coach Bob Gregson was equally surprised.

"I knew they were planning to do some work," he said, "but I didn't know exactly when it would start."

Gregson said he does not think the pool situation would have an adverse effect on his team's chance for a national title. He said it would have been a bigger problem earlier in the season, but not now. He said his team is still getting plenty of hours in the water.

Those hours have been coming in the Ellensburg city pool. The athletic department has been able to rent the pool until Jan. 23, Frederick said he hopes the Pavilion pool will be ready by Jan. 27.

The late bids are the major reason for the construction delays. According to Donn Roth of Facilities Planning and Construction, the company doing the work had to send Central three bids before being selected to do the job. Roth said there was also a week delay due to the late arrival of some light fixtures used on the project.

More Central students than just those on the swim team have been affected by the pool foul-up. As a result of the belated construction, all physical education aquatics were canceled winter quarter.

Frederick said he would rather the repairs had simply been canceled for the time being, instead of being delayed and interfering with the swim team's practice schedule.

A SINKING FEELING — The Nicholson Pavilion swimming pool is currently void of water while repairs are being done. The late start on construction has led to a whole host of problems.

Wrestlers grappling for district title

By Dave Cook
Staff Writer

A pair of banners proclaiming Central as NAIA national wrestling champions in 1971 and 1974 hang proudly from the rafters at Nicholson Pavilion.

And although it's doubtful a third banner will be added beside the other two in 1984, Central's rich tradition in wrestling alone will again make the Wildcats contenders in district and national competition.

Central kicked off its 1984 campaign last week by taking fifth in the tough Mercer Island Invitational wrestling meet. Tonight the 'Cats are at Big Bend Community College before traveling to Tacoma Saturday for the Pacific Lutheran Invitational. (See Sportsline for more details).

"We have a lot of question marks," admitted head coach Eric Beardsley, who's coached Central in all 25 years of the team's existence. "We lost some key people."

Beardsley's graduation losses include All-American C.D. Hoiness, who finished fourth at 150 pounds at last year's national meet.

Also lost were 134-pound Hedj Nelson and 142-pound Rick Anderle. Both also wrestled at the national meet but didn't place.

Together, the three wrestlers won 51 matches and lost 18 and helped lead CWU to a 12th place finish at nationals.

Despite Central's losses, the 'Cats are ranked ninth in the latest NAIA national poll after finishing 12th in last year's national tourney. Beardsley figures last year's finish and the 'Cats winning tradition are primarily what garnered the 'Cats the lofty ranking.

"Tradition and the fact we finished up pretty well last year are the biggest reasons," Beardsley said of the ranking. "When you lose three of four national competitors, you have to wonder how you can be ranked so high."

One reason could be the return of 126-pound Robin MacAlpine, a junior from Chugiak, Alaska. MacAlpine finished second at nationals last year, losing to Keith Colsch of Loras College in Iowa in the finals. MacAlpine finished the season with a 25-11 match record. "He's capable of winning it all this year," Beardsley said. "He won't be satisfied with second again."

A skin infection kept MacAlpine out of the 'Cats' season opener at Mercer Island, but he was given a doctor's approval to wrestle this week.

"He is highly gifted physically," Beardsley added. "He also has good technique on his feet."

Other returning wrestlers include Greg Ford (4-5-1 last year), John Jones (3-15), Greg Farley (11-15-1) and Joe Maguire (12-10-1).

But three of those wrestlers — with the exception of Maguire — have already been plagued by injuries. Ford injured a muscle near his ribs, Jones hurt his knee and Farley is nursing a sore shoulder.

"Any injury we get now really makes things tough," a concerned Beardsley said. "Hopefully those guys won't be out too long."

Kelly Willard, Mike Spurr, T.R. Raygor, Tom Grubb, Nick

Dougherty, David Stai, Paul Luce, Ralph Wilson, Rusty Porterfield and Craig Danielson were other wrestlers singled out by Beardsley.

Standing in Central's way of a District 1-2 title (Districts 1 and 2 are combined in wrestling) are a trio of teams, all ranked higher than Central.

Defending NAIA national champion Southern Oregon is ranked third, while national runner-up Simon Fraser is fifth. Pacific, Oregon is ranked just ahead of Central at eighth.

"We probably have the toughest district in the United States," Beardsley commented. "Having four teams from our district in the top ten is a great accomplishment. Our district is getting a lot of respect."

The 'Cats have already tangled with Simon Fraser at the meet at Mercer Island. Central was thumped 43-3 by a team Beardsley has great respect for.

"As a team I think Simon Fraser is tougher than they were last year," he said. "They lost two national champions and that might hurt them at district and nationals. But they're a lot stronger in dual meets because of their depth."

Despite his team's apparent

lack of experience and his opponents' apparent strength, Beardsley hasn't yet written off his team for any post-season accomplishments. Christmas break put almost a month-long halt to workouts, but Beardsley said his teams have always been slow starters.

"We have a lot of catching up to do," said the NAIA Hall-of-Famer. "It's just a matter of getting in shape and getting people healthy."

"We'll see how we do when it really counts," he added.

"We've never done very well early. But we've always come on at the end."

And maybe there still is the possibility — although ever so slight — of hanging up another national championship banner at Nicholson Pavilion.

Busy weekend for hoops

Compiled from staff reports

Central jumps into its District 1 schedule in full force this weekend, taking on Simon Fraser and Western Washington at Nicholson Pavilion.

The 'Cats play a young Simon Fraser team Friday and a small, but winning Viking club on Saturday. Then comes the big game.

Central tangles with District 1 favorite Whitworth Tuesday, also at Nicholson Pavilion. All three games start at 7:30 p.m.

"This is an important weekend for us," coach Dean Nicholson said. "We are looking forward to getting back into district play."

Central is 1-2 in district play, having defeated Whitman and Pacific Lutheran but losing to Lewis-Clark State.

Simon Fraser is the youngest team in the district with eight freshmen and two sophomores on its 12-man roster. The Clansmen's top players are Wayne Corness, Dave Lescheld and Bob Hietjies.

The Vikings are led by juniors John DeFranco and Todd Bailey. DeFranco averages 17.8 points per game and also has 50 steals and 52 assists. Bailey is scoring at a 19.4 clip while shooting 61.6 percent from the floor.

Former CWU player Greg Lambrecht joins DeFranco at guard. Lambrecht averages 3.9 points and leads the team in assists.

Whitworth has lost just one game this season (as of Jan. 9), to St. Martin's in overtime last December. Central defeated St. Martin's 95-74 in its season opener Nov. 18.

The Pirates, however, were without the services of two key transfers in the St. Martin's game. Seven-foot center Ron Burns and Michael Ingram are finally eligible after sitting out the first part of the season because of NCAA transfer rules.

Even without the two transfers, Whitworth returns four starters from last season. They include Brad Meyers, Damon Gill, Kevin Simmons and all-District 1 selection Bob Mandeville. Tommy Stewart has been the fifth starter this season.

Central's record is an unimpressive 6-5, but three of those losses have come in the hands of NCAA Division 1 teams — including two hard-fought losses this past week.

The 'Cats lost to Montana last Saturday 71-58 and dropped a 65-62 overtime decision to Portland Tuesday.

Central played impressively in both games. Central trailed by just six points late in the game against Montana before the Grizzlies' pulled away in the final two minutes.

Ken Buntun led Central with 14 points and 10 rebounds. Freshman Ron vanderSchaaf had his best game of his short Central career, scoring 10 points and grabbing five rebounds.

game at 57 and send it into overtime. Portland outscored Central 8-5 in the extra period to claim the victory.

Buntun led CWU scoring with 18 points. Jen Jordon added 14 and Reggie Wright had 10. Central shot 61 percent from the field, but that figure was offset somewhat by a 59 percent shooting night by Portland.

MEN'S JV BASKETBALL

The JVs' are in the midst of a 10-day break before taking to the hardwood again next Monday at Highline Community College. Central is at the University of Puget Sound JV's on Wednesday.

The 'Cats are 3-5 for the season after losing to Columbia Basin College 76-71 Dec. 5.

That game with Hawks was the rubber match of an interesting three-game series. CBC won the first by 32 points, but Central turned the tables a bit in the second game, winning by 29.

In the third game, Central was led by Brad Evenson and Doug Snipes with 16 points each. Jim Beeson scored 12 points and added 10 rebounds.

The 'Cats played the game without the services of 6-foot-8 freshman Ron vanderSchaaf. VanderSchaaf was promoted to a full-time varsity position after averaging 16.7 points and 10.3 points per game.

SWIMMING

Although CWU's swimming pool at Nicholson Pavilion is drained dry, the 'Cats home swim meet Saturday with the University of Idaho will still take place as planned.

The meet will be at the Ellensburg city pool beginning at 9:30 a.m. It will be Central's first swimming action since Dec. 3 and its last at home.

While the rest of the team was looking for a place to practice last weekend, Central's swimming sensation John Sayre helped represent the United States in the prestigious USS International swim meet at the University of Texas in Austin.

Although not preparing for the meet seriously, Sayre won the consolation championships in the 400 meter individual medley. He placed ninth overall with a time of 4:32.19. He had a time of 4:35.93 in the preliminaries.

Sayre has already qualified for the NAA national swim meet in seven events. Other Central qualifiers include Garde Morison.

Moore and Peter Braden.

Five women have also qualified for nationals, including Nancy Simmerly, Mary Langarini, Kathy Lang, Kris Platte and Laurie Partch.

(Please see related story on page 11).

WOMEN'S JV BASKETBALL

Central's JV's are idle until Jan. 27 when the 'Cats host Lewis-Clark State at 3 p.m. at Nicholson Pavilion.

The women are coming off a 74-45 home loss to North Idaho Jan. 4. Ruth Bennett and Julie Fees led Central scoring with 14 points each. Deanna Sanders led the 'Cats with 10 rebounds.

WRESTLING

Central's wrestling team will get a good indication of its strength this season when they travel to Tacoma Saturday for the Pacific Lutheran Invitational.

The 'Cats, who wrestle at Big Bend Community College tonight, then return home to entertain PLU in Central's home-opener next Wednesday. The first match at Nicholson Pavilion starts at 7 p.m.

The 'Cats kicked off their season last weekend by winning one of five dual meets in a tournament at Mercer Island High School.

Selah sophomore Nick Dougherty won both his matches at 150 pounds, including Central's only individual win against Oregon. Freshman David Stal at 118 pounds and Joe Maguire at 190 also won two matches each. Stal, also from Selah, won both his matches via pins.

Stal was one of only three individual wins by Central in a 34-9 loss to WSU on Tuesday. Other Central winners included Kevin Anson at 126 pounds and Kelly Willard at 134.

(Please see related story on page 12).

OTHER CWU SPORTS

Central defensive tackle Tim DeGross has been selected to the NAA All-American second-team for the 1983 football season.

DeGross led Central in quarterback sacks for the second consecutive year with 4½. He was also credited with 45 primary tackles and 20 assists for a total of 65, a record for Wildcat down linemen. In addition, he had blocked three passes.

In 1982, DeGross was an All-American honorable mention pick. He was also a three-time All-Evergreen Conference selection and a three-time All-District 1 selection.

DeGross is a 1983 fall quarter business administration

'Cats hit warpath against Chieftains

By Brenda Berube
Staff Writer

Central's women's basketball team will tip-off against Seattle University tonight in a 7 p.m. rematch on the Lady Chieftain's home court.

In its last meeting with Central Dec. 20, SU's Angel Petrich, a sophomore from Cle Elum, had 21 points and 21 rebounds to lead the Chieftains to a 51-42 win. Central had led by 12 in the first half.

Coach Gary Frederick is looking to run the ball and press more against Seattle this time.

"Against SU we press better, and in a five-on-five running situation we have excellent team speed," Frederick said.

Saturday the 'Cats face Western Washington University in a showdown at 5 p.m. at Nicholson Pavilion.

Western is riding an 11-game winning streak and is favored to take the District 1 title this year. The Vikings have not faced the Wildcats this season, but Frederick has his team ready for a very physical game.

Western is 11-1 for the season and has won 21 of the last 22 games between the two schools.

Nita Wing, who leads the team in steals, was noted as an improved player by Frederick.

"Nita has been effective and exciting coming off the bench. She is playing tough defense," commented Frederick.

The women are coming off a busy winter break schedule. The 'Cats won four games and lost five, and have a 7-5 record for the season. The 'Cats lost their five games by an average of just five points per game.

"Considering our five losses were from a point spread of nine points or less, and our team consists of 15 underclassmen, we are doing well," said Frederick.

"We could very easily have a 12-0 record, but we lost some close games," he added.

Renee Corliss took over as the team's leading scorer averaging 8.8 points per game. She is followed by Toni Larimer with an 8.7 average.

Marcia Byrd and Lisa Carlson have been rebounding well according to Frederick. Byrd has 113 boards in 12 games and Carlson, 102 in 11 games.

Gym-rat basketball tips off

By Jerry Hink
Staff Writer

When someone mentions CWU basketball, the first thought that generally comes to mind is Dean Nicholson and the highly regarded Wildcat basketball program.

And those who play in the CWU program are talented athletes.

But now the CWU intramural program is beginning its basketball leagues for those not fortunate enough to vertical jump 40 inches and connect on 20-foot jump shots with regularity.

Even though there are approximately 70 teams signed up in the four divisions (coed, women's, men's six-foot and over, and men's six-foot and under), Jerry Findley, CWU recreation coordinator, said students may sign up teams until Friday at 5 p.m. at Nicholson Pavilion 108. There is a team fee of $40 to cover expenses for scorekeepers, timers and referees.

"Although some teams will begin play on Wednesday (yesterday), we're giving students until Friday to sign up because of the short notice," Findley said. "With the added sign-up time we might be able to add between 10 and 20 teams to the program."

Currently Findley's only problem with the basketball program is finding enough playing days.

"Since we have to schedule around the men's and women's varsity and JV programs in basketball and the wrestling team, and possible concert dates if there are any, that leaves the intramural program with a total of 16 days to work with in the next quarter," Findley said.

On game days, all four courts at Nicholson Pavilion will be used from 6-11 p.m. or longer.

If basketball isn't your game, the intramural program is sponsoring a racquetball tournament Jan. 20-22 at Nicholson Pavilion.

Student related bills being decided in legislature

By Darci Buzbee
Staff Writer

A bill enabling a student to belong to and vote with the Board of Trustees, and a bill which will prevent tuition from rising, are both being considered in the state legislature.

Jeff Morris, 19, Quigley, Washington Student Lobby president, said a long process is involved when trying to get a bill passed.

"First, a legislative package is put together, including the general things WSL wants to accomplish. These packages are then sent to all the legislators," he said.

WSL obtains certain legislators to support them consistently, and sponsor and propose the bills. Morris said legislators believe three or four of the bills that didn't pass last year have a good chance of passing this year.

Sessions began Jan. 11 in Olympia. Central students are being trained so they will be able to testify in Olympia.

"Bringing students down to testify has the greatest impact," said Morris.

Morris stressed the importance of students calling the legislative hotline number and giving their opinions. The hotline number is 1-800-562-6000.

Randal Anderson/Campus Crier

Terri Weiss, like most Central students, battled crowds and closed classes in the quarterly ritual of registration.
